Chapter 1 by Death Snake Productions

Prologue

Many years ago, a race of human known a Maiores made themselves known to Earth. The Maiores were believed by many to be the powerful and supreme version of human, but they weren't. The Maiores were actually humans, some with unique gene mutations. They were from a planet that only few call Caelum, a Earth-like planet that's location is unknown to humanity. Although its location is unknown, we have one way to travel their, the Gateway.

The Gateway is a hyperspace-transporter that would send human or machine through its gate and to Caelum, or any other planet of the operator choice. This is how the Maiores found Earth.

When the Maiores first arrived to Earth, they attacked North America, leaving it a ruined landscape. Luckily there were survivors, only few hundred-thousand making out alive. The survivors fled to either Europe seeking refuge or to the remaining US islands, Hawaii being one of them.

Five years after the attack on North America, South America was attacked and soon turned into another charred landscape of nothing. Europe, Africa, Pacific, Africa, and Asia were afraid they were going to be attack next, until 1724 a company called New World's Arms made a new powerful weapon. This weapon was called the ARC, which stand for All-Terrain Combat Unit. The ARC was a powerful weapon that was capable of destroying anything and everything in its path. New world's Arms named it the ARC, which stand for All-Terrain Combat Unit.

The New World promised the old UN that they would show the Maiores Empire that humanity is a force to be reckon with. All that New World wanted was to recreate the UN in New World's image. At first the UN refused, until the invasion of Europe happen.

On July 7, 2001, the Maiores Empire attacked the UN H.Q. in Paris. UN forces scrambled everything they had and tried to protect their capital, but in first four hours half of the city fell to Maiores Empire. All seemed hopeless, until a savior in white metal-armor came. This white ATCU was more advanced than anything that both the UN or the Maiores ever saw before. It looked like white futuristic knight with large shoulders that carried hundreds of rockets and missiles. It held two large automatic rifles and it wrists had two rectangle-objects attached that generated two large blue energy blades.

When it first landed, no one knew what to make of it, until it started to attack the Maiores soldiers. The white warrior ripped five Maiores Empire's Guardian-class mechs to shreds in matter of seconds, before any of the other soldiers of Maiores Empire could even react. The commanding officer of the Maiores Imperial forces, Warlord Ares snapped out of his shocked and awe at the white mech, before yelling at his men to open fire on the attacker. His men fired hundreds of rounds of energy at the white ATCU, trying their best to kill it, but in the end nothing seemed to affect it.

The ATCU charged at Ares' force cutting each and every one of the Imperial forces soldiers down. Ares, the Warlord of War and Victory, was afraid of a single human warrior, who was now standing in front of him. Ares had cut down many of the human ATCUs before, including the 'invincible' Reaper and his Scorpio ATCU.

As the white ATCU stood in front of Ares, it raised both of its rifles at the Warlord, before firing. The sound of both cannons fired, Ares move his custom Guardian-class, named after him, Ares away from the two shells, before pulling out his staff. He then moved his slender mech towards the more, but not-so bulky white ATCU before trying to stab his new foe. When he lunged at the white ATCU, the impossible happened, it disappeared.

ground. From there, the Warlord Ares knew he failed his mission and that death will come quickly to him either from this human, or from the King.

But it never happened, for the strange white ATCU disappeared again. Never to be seen again, until major battles in the war, helping humanity win. Soldiers from both sides gave this pilot many names: White Death, Hell's Angel, and the more well known name of White Raven.

In the closing ends of the first war, both the UN and the Maiores made a treaty, known as Lunar Accords. This treaty states that Maiores Empire and Earth will have a ceasefire, until either one of humanity or the Maiores have committed unthinkable actions towards each other. This treaty also allow the Maiores to have a few on their landing spires, or known as Siege Castle-class Battleship on standby. The Accords also allowed humanity to have the Moon under their control along with the Gateway. With this treaty signed, the war seem to be over. Or was it just the beginning.
